Of the bright and happy past Of the days so fair and fleeting! Hours that sped away too fast. If I do but close my eyelids-

In the firelight on the wall-Fancy pictures well-loved faces, That fond memory can recall. Faces that have smiled upon me

When my spirit was oppressed.

And I found their true affection Brought me happiness and rest. Voices that were ever speaking Words of love and kindly cheer;

But, alas! while here I linger, I their tones no more shall hear. Twinkling stars that shine above me, Can ye not some token show To the lonely heart and weary, Watching, waiting here below?

Whispering winds, whence come ye? Tell us: In that world beyond our ken Do our love and lost wait for us?-

Shall we meet again, and when? Birds, with fleet wing, ye are sinless, And may'st sonr where we cannot,

Bear a message to the loved ones, Lost (but loved) and unforgot. Tell them we are sad without them-That we never can forget-

And we crave some answering token That they know and love us yet. No reply comes to my pleading; Winds, birds, stars, alike fulfill The command of God, our Father; And we, too, must wait his will.
